D. Edema, Lymphedema & Leg Wounds: Improving Clinical OutcomesByron Shier MBA, BSc, OT CLT-LANA, CHE*Linda (Koby) Blanchfield RMT, CLT-LANA

Understanding the difference between edema and lymphedema, the pathophysiology and management of lymphedema is essential to proper and successful wound care. Appropriate graduated compression therapy is mandatory to achieving and maintaining lymphedema volume reduction. The hands on portion of this workshop will provide clinicians an opportunity to be exposed to the principles and practical application of lymphedema compression therapy.

Participant Limit: 30

E. Interpreting ResearchJanet Forrester, PhD

Why are randomized, controlled trials the "gold standard" of medical research study designs? How do researchers account for "chance findings"? We will address these questions and examine the role of chance as it applies to medical research. Topics covered will include:

- the role of randomization in clinical trials
- the interpretation of confidence intervals
- the interpretation of p values
- the difference between statistical significance and clinical significance
- the role of sample size and statistical power
